

DOING COMPARATIVE URBAN RESEARCH

As a run-up to the book launch of “The Politics of Slums in the Global South”, NIBR invites you to a seminar with Dr. Nicolas Bautès and three of the editors/authors of the book.

“Doing urban research on different continents (India and Brazil) – Challenges to comparative analysis”

Nicolas Bautès, Université de Caen

Comments from editors & authors of the book “The Politics of Slums in the Global South”

- Einar Braathen, NIBR (challenges to comparative analysis of Brazil)
- Véronique Dupont, Institute of Research for Development (IRD), France (challenges to comparative analysis of India)
- David Jordhus-Lier, University of Oslo (challenges to comparative analysis of South Africa)
- Discussion

Nicolas Bautès is assistant professor at the University of Caen, France, in social and political geography. His research interests concern the study of social mobilizations around cultural and heritage productions, in their political and spatial dimensions. His works also deal with conflicts, clientelism and illegalisms in urban areas. He is mainly conducting research in India and Brazil.

